

Assessment of Activities of Daily Living (ADLs) Measures:

Whether the person can accomplish each activity independently, whether they need partial supervision or assistance and whether they are fully dependent on others.

- Personal self-care, (feeding oneself, bathing, using restroom, dressing, etc.).
- Mobility: ability to move from a bed to a standing position or to a chair (transfer), able to walk (with or without assisted devices) or use a wheelchair.

Assessment of Instrumental Activities of Daily Living (IADLs)

Assess whether the person can accomplish each activity necessary to manage their living environment independently or whether they are dependent on others.

- Shopping for groceries, housekeeping, cooking, etc.

Our case managers work with the clients and their families to determine the health care limits and how best to utilize the case managers.

Our clients get assistance finding community resources that can help them make the best use of their benefits. We work as an advocate for the clients and will make management of their condition as successful as possible.

We guarantee to provide preventative, restorative and only the highest level of services. Here at DHHC, we believe in treating everyone as people and not patients. We insist on helping maintain as normal a lifestyle as possible.

There are four major problem areas in home care pain management:

- Discrepancy between family caregiver reports of pain and patient's actual description of pain
- Lack of understanding by the patient and family about proper medication use and pain management techniques
- Fear of side effects such as addiction, nausea, constipation, and inability to concentrate
- Under use of complementary techniques such as massage or music therapy
